WELCOME THE STRANGER: We are all travelers in what John Bunyan call the wilderness of the world, and the best we can find in our travels are honest friends. There are fortunate voyagers who find many. They keep us worthy of ourselves. Robert Louis Stevenson

PASTOR'S CORNER: 1) All Saints' Party - I wanted to thank all of those who organized and helped to make this year's All Saints' Party a great success. We had a wide sampling of the Communion of Saints represented - a couple of St. Mary's, St. Nicholas, an infant St. Clare (complete with monstrance), an actual bi-locating St. Padre Pio(!), and even a couple of Maria Goretti's. You can see some photos on the St. Rose Priory Facebook page. There was good food and fellowship. So start planning your costume for next year! 2) Veterans Day - We've just had another Election Day. Elections have a way of bringing out the things that divide us - differences in party loyalties as well as policy preferences. So, it is perhaps a happy coincidence that our nation celebrates this weekend something that I think should unify us - honoring our veterans. Whether you were a Red stater or a Blue stater, we all need to recognize that the only reason we as a people even have the power to select our leaders is that there have been millions of men and women over the last 243 years who have been willing to put their own lives in danger for the good of our country. Patriotism, the love of one's country, is a virtue, and our veterans have, by their valiant service, exercised this virtue in an exemplary way. One does not have to wear a uniform to serve your country, but in honoring those who have, we give ourselves a powerful reminder that working for the good of all requires selflessness, sacrifice, and honor – three virtues we will all need if we hope to bring our country back together. God bless our veterans! Archdiocese of Military Services Collection – I hope you will be generous for our second collection. The needs of our service men and women and veterans are great, and there could be no better way to honor them this Veterans Day weekend than to help the Archdiocese of Military Services provide them with the pastoral care they deserve.
